The Canyon High School girls basketball team has traded their basketball suits for track warm-ups. For about two months, the girls under Coach Bob Schneider will be involved in track but before school is out they will be back on the basketball court. Pictured above is Lisa Cathey clearing the high jump bar in a recent practice session. The track team will travel to Panhandle for their first meet March 22.

But, Canyon has priority for funding Sewage plan for ranch stalled

A sewage effluent disposal plan which could provide the West Texas State University Nance Ranch with irrigation water and rid the City of Canyon of federal and state treatment problems has been shelved only temporarily and could be funded soon.

City and university officials said last week they are still interested in pursuing a plan to pipe a million gallons of effluent per day from the Canyon sewage treatment plant to the Nance Ranch for irrigation purposes. But, former City Manager George Louder of Canyon said the project is on a waiting list for funding through the federal government.

Louder said the Canyon project, which is estimated to cost about $350,000, has been given a priority as number 397 on a list of projects to be eventually funded by the federal Environmental Protection Agency.

He said the executive branch recently released funding for projects through number 190 and then again for projects through number 220.

"So, the next funding list might be the next shot for Canyon," he said.

Louder, before leaving Canyon to become executive director of the Panhandle Regional Planning Commission, worked out the proposal with Dr. Charles Smallwood, dean of the WTSU School of Agriculture.

Smallwood said last week he is still very much interested in the project and indicated the university is still willing to foot at least a portion of the bill for the pipeline construction some eight miles to the university ranch from the sewer plant in East Canyon.

Currently, effluent from the plant is spewed directly into Tierra Blanca Creek.

New Canyon City Manager Glen Metcalf said he, too, is very interested in pursuing the project, which he believes would be mutually beneficial to Canyon and the university.

Many cities, he said, are purchasing their own farms and then leasing the acreage for farming with irrigation coming from the city sewer plants. He cited Hereford as an example of this method.

Metcalf indicated strict regulations on operation of sewage plants and treatment of effluent before it may be emitted into a stream or river have been laid down by the federal EPA and state agencies, making it much more attractive to dispose of effluent on croplands.

The city manager indicated he will continue to pursue the project until all resources are exhausted.

No tax hike in new year budget

Public hearing due on city budget

Canyon city commissioners will hear a report on the possibility of using solar energy to heat the city swimming pool this summer, will conduct a public hearing and then will consider approval of their $982,000 1975-76 budget during their Monday night meeting here.

The city's fiscal year begins April 1.

Commissioners instructed City Manager Glen Metcalf to meet with Dr. Vaughn Nelson,

West Texas State University physicist, before the Monday session to discuss the possibility of implementing one-half of Nelson's proposed plan to use solar energy to heat the city's pool.

Nelson had said the construction of a solar energy conversion unit for the pool would cost about twice as much as the city had budgeted for the new fiscal year for purchase of a new boiler at the pool. But, he has also said half the unit could be constructed this summer and half next summer. A public hearing on the proposed budget will be held prior to consideration of approval of the document, which reflects an approximate 5 per cent increase in expenditures next year over this year.

Income for the coming year is projected to be $982,820 with disbursements expected to total $982,048.

Primary areas of expenditure for the fiscal year include:

*$154,000 for the city police department

*$89,000 for the city street department

*$109,000 for the city water production and distribution system

*$65,000 for city sewer services

A major expenditure item for the coming year is embodied in a $75,000 contingency fund.

Former City Manager George Louder, who prepared the budget before he resigned here, told commissioners he established the large contingency fund to meet equipment and supply needs and emergency problems for the new Canyon city hall complex.

Salaries for employees of the city make up the bulk of the 1975-76 budget, with $426,500 appropriated for salaries. A total of $192,000 is allocated for contractual services and $72,000 is allocated for supplies.

Taxes will not be raised for city residents under the budget proposal.

In other business set for the Monday meeting, commissioners will open bids for the bank depository for city funds.

Only one bidder—First National Bank of Canyon—submitted a proposal to Randall County commissioners last month when they asked for bids for the depository.

Bids for construction of water and sewer lines in Hunsley Hills subdivision will also be opened and tabulated by commisthose things which motivate men to progress change with each generation.

Ten to 15 years ago, those things which motivated Americans were largely outside forces, demands to have more, bigger and better material goods and objects, he said.

In the past 18 months, with the advent of the specter of world starvation, the growing list of shortages and the lessening value of money Baker said Americans have begun changing their values and are motivated less by the desire to have material goods.

People, he said, have learned they have to "be their own magi-

School buys old hospital for offices, classrooms

School board members voted Thursday night to purchase for $35,001 the old Neblett Hospital building in downtown Canyon after learning the building could be used to free classroom space on over-crowded school campuses here.

Supt. Jerry Jacobs told the board the hospital building, designed to house 30 hospital beds, could be rejuvenated to house administrative offices, the tax office, and even certain classes including kindergarten.

He presented the proposal to purchase the old hospital structure in terms of the space which could be saved for classroom use in Rex Reeves Elementary School and Canyon High School.

Jacobs termed the need for classroom space on the campuses "critical" and said by removing the central administrative offices from the Canyon High campus, at least two classrooms would be freed for use by students.

"We are at capacity and beyond on every campus we have," he said.

Jacobs said it is a possibility that the kindergarten program could be removed from the Rex Reeves campus and placed in the old hospital building, thereby freeing other classrooms on that campus.

In addition, he said, certain early childhood development programs for the severely handicapped could be taught in facilities at the hospital. Class space for the severely mentally retarded will also be needed in the future, Jacobs said, and these facilities could be provided at the hospital.

Cooperative vocational classrooms also might be provided in the old hospital.

The athletic director and coach for the system would also have an office in the central structure.

The funds from the sale of the building will go to Palo Duro Hospital, since it has acquired the assets of the Neblett Hospital.

The structure was constructed in the 1930s by Dr. R.A. Neblett. It was closed early this year after construction of the new Palo Duro Hospital was completed in East Canyon.

Canyon senior citizens had been bargaining for the structure for use as a senior citizens center, but were discouraged by the potential operating costs of the building.

In other business during their special session Thursday night, board members went into executive session to review the applications and credentials of nine candidates for the vacant position of athletic director and head high school football coach.

School pace slow here, visitor says

Canyon school students who think they've got it tough should switch places with Laura Pereira for a year.

Laura, a native of El Salvador, a small Central American country south of Mexico, takes 14 subjects, including chemistry, physics, math, English, Spanish, geography, in her high school in San Salvador.

An American Field Service foreign exchange student in Arlington, Laura is visiting for two weeks in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Mitchell. During her stay, she is attending Canyon High School with the Mitchell's daughter, Irene.

While Laura is attending school in Arlington and in Canyon for these two weeks, she'll return to San Salvador and will be required to repeat her senior year there next fall, even though she'll receive a high school diploma from Arlington's coast.

The proposal to split Texas into five states, Sherman said, is a response to the apparent power of the combined New England states in lobbying for strict environmental or petroleum-harming legislation, because Gammage and Agnich feel with Texas split asunder, more representatives would go to Washington to speak up for the interests of the state.

The legislative attempts to take the teeth out of the 55-mile-per-hour speed law and to harbor Texas oil and gas produced from state-owned lands for Texans' use first are also efforts to back up Gov. Dolph Briscoe, who has been openly critical of Washington energy policies.

The state Senate and House, Sherman said, have passed a resolution for transmission to Washington urging that other states in the nation maximize efforts to find new energy resources.

tion of athletic director and head high school football coach.

Jacobs said the school district has received nearly 45 applications for the position.

He said the administration will proceed as fast as possible in hiring a new athletic director/coach, and it is possible the board will interview the top two or three candidates for the job during their regular meeting Tuesday night.

He said it is also possible that a decision on the new coach will be made at the meeting.

He has said the new athletic director should be on the job in April.

The position was vacated last month by the resignation of Ron Mills, who had been here four years. Mills is athletic director and head coach at Bay City.

Commissioners seeking legislative bills' support

Randall County commissioners went to Fort Worth Wednesday to begin the second round of activities centering on the politics of the Texas legislative session in Austin, and they carried with them some ideas on how their lot might be improved.

County Judge Woody Pond as well as other commissioners were to attend sessions of the West Texas County Judge and Commissioners Association convention in Fort Worth during the latter part of the week.

When they went, they carried several resolutions and some ideas for other changes which they'd like to see the West Texas group embrace for eventual support before the Texas legislature.

The first round of convention-going, an initial step in gaining official sanction and sounding out other opinions on issues facing county government, was held two weeks ago when the Panhandle County Judges and Commissioners Association met in Amarillo.

From that convention, and from the Fort Worth convention will come formalized resolutions which will be forwarded to the Texas County Judges and Commissioners Association for consideration.

An executive committee of the state group will turn the resolutions into legislative proposals for formal presentation and then will lobby for passage of the bills. Randall County Judge Woody Pond is a member of the executive committee.

One bill Randall County officials will be pushing all the way through the state level of the organization is one already introduced by Rep. Bob Simpson allowing the county to construct a South Amarillo courthouse annex which is already under construction.

The bill is pending in committee currently and Pond said Monday he understands there will be no problem of passage of the law, which would in effect

Kelly Forehand, a CHS senior injured last fall on the football field, received a football Friday morning signed by members of pro football's Oakland Raiders. Donald Seager of Amarillo made the presentation on behalf of the team. Seager, whose son played on the Amarillo Caprock team when Kelly was injured, took it upon himself to solicit support for the Forehand family by sending letters concerning Kelly's injury to all professional football teams and major football teams. Seager tried to get Dallas Cowboy Walt Garrison who is in Amarillo to present the ball but Garrison wasn't available.

Sen. Max Sherman says energy top concern, though

Plan for Texas division not really taken seriously in Austin

State Sen. Bob Gammage of Houston and Rep. Fred Agnich of Dallas may be serious about their proposal to split Texas into five states to increase representation in Washington, but Canyon's State Sen. Max Sherman said Thursday other Texas legislators are not taking the proposal seriously.

"It's been talked about but never seriously," Sherman said from his Austin office.

Gammage and Agnich proposed at mid-week that Texas be split into five states and also proposed that a referendum vote on the issue be submitted to the voters here in November 1976.

"It is an eye-catcher," Sherman said of the proposal. "It's more interesting than some of the slow, trudging hard-work legislation. I don't detect a serious response yet."

The day after Gammage and Agnich went before the press in Austin to air their proposal, Sherman said he had, in fact, heard no comment from other senators on the possibility of splitting up the state.

The basis of the proposal by Gammage and Agnich for dividing the state, Sherman said, has also been the basis for other legislative proposals in recent days calling for such things as a decriminalizing of the 55-mile-per-hour speed limit, and the use of Texas oil and gas for Texans, first.

That basis is rooted in the feeling among legislators that Eastern states have effectively lobbied in Congress for laws and policies which are detrimental to the interests of Texas, a state where oil and gas production are the number one industries.

The measures Sherman said, are responses to the feeling that while Eastern states lobby for an end to the oil depletion allowance or restrictive environmental practices which might substantially harm the industry in Texas, they make no efforts to pursue the search for oil and gas resources off the Atlantic sea-coast.

The proposal to split Texas into five states, Sherman said, is a response to the apparent power of the combined New England states in lobbying for strict environmental or petroleum-harming legislation, because Gammage and Agnich feel with Texas split asunder, more representatives would go to Washington to speak up for the interests of the state.

The legislative attempts to take the teeth out of the 55-mile-per-hour speed law and to harbor Texas oil and gas produced from state-owned lands for Texans' use first are also efforts to back up Gov. Dolph Briscoe, who has been openly critical of Washington energy policies.

The state Senate and House, Sherman said, have passed a resolution for transmission to Washington urging that other states in the nation maximize efforts to find new energy resources.

In connection with this effort, he said, representatives of Texas, New Mexico, Louisiana and Oklahoma have been meeting in Dallas and other cities recently to formulate plans for joint action similar to that taken by the New England states, action aimed at protecting the interests of those states.

Sherman said it is understandable that Texas and its legislators should be interested in preserving or aiding the chief industry in the state and said the measure introduced and supported by Sen. Walter Mengden of Houston which calls for all oil and gas produced on the state's own land to be allocated "to fulfill the needs of Texans but it can be shipped to other states" also understandable in this light.

Some of the bills introduced concerning energy and Texas, bills such as the 55-mile-per-hour speed bill serve not only to support the governor in his reaction to attempts to stifle the oil and gas industries but also "to let off some steam," Sherman said.

Our World

Out With the Young

OUR WORLD
By ANN BROWN
On April 22, Texas will call a special election (predicted to cost at least $1.5 million) to vote on an issue that the voters have already rejected 5 times in similar balloting since 1960: a pay raise for our legislators.
Also on this special ballot, which does not coincide with any other political action, is another proposed state constitutional change to increase retirement plans of public school teachers, and state and local government employees.
Pension increases for retirees also depend on the outcome of the election.
As a rule, few voters turn out for special elections, usually only the ones with a vested interest in the outcome.
The legislators and the state employees are not the only people with a vested interest in this election, however.
The taxpayers are already stuck for $1.5 million for the cost of the election, and will have to pay another $1.5 million over the next two years for the pay increase for the legislators, if the bill passes.
The pension increase will cost $123.8 million annually.
Doesn't $126.8 million sound like quite a vested interest?
There is not enough money in Texas to pay good teachers for the contributions they make to our children and our Country. But the bad ones are being paid too much already.
An additional 4 per cent will be deducted from the teachers' salaries to help meet the pension costs.
There is no doubt that many teachers and state employees need a pay increase. (Don't we all?) However, struggling young parents probably need that 4 per cent more now than they will after they are 65.
It is also true that, teachers already have much better incomes, vacations, and retirement plans than nurses, secretaries, and numerous other public servants. And how many farmers, ranchers, small business people, and other workers in the private sector, who pay the teachers' salaries, are as well compensated?

The legislators? That's another story.
On the surface it sounds bad. They get $4,800 a year, with $10.00 a day for expenses while the legislature is in session, and 10 cents a mile travel pay if they use their personal cars for state business.
But the legislators also get $4,000 every month for office expenses, and the senators get $5,500.
Incidentally, Sen. Chet Brooks (D. Houston) said, "In this recession and with rising unemployment, it's extremely poor taste and poor timing for the legislature to ask for a pay raise."
Sen. Brooks understands, because he was a financial success BEFORE he went into politics.
Originally, Texas legislators were allowed to set their own pay rates. They received $5.00 a day while in session. But that's not all the story either.
For many years, Texas lawmakers were mature farmers, ranchers, and businessmen who had achieved sufficient financial security to leave their affairs with their families or employees while they served the state. Or they were retired teachers, lawyers and other professionals who were financially independent.
The position was considered an honor, and the men served as a civic duty for the good of Texas. So — they served TEXAS.

Now the majority of our legislators are budding lawyers or other youngsters fresh out of college. They are novices in more ways than one.
It is bad having men make laws who know nothing about the practical side of law. But laws can be repealed.
It's worse having men down in Austin spending our living when they have never earned their own.
Perhaps the most tragic aspect, however, of sending neophytes to Austin is the damage done to them and their families. (Texas is old and strong, we can probably survive.)
Special interest groups send beautiful sirens to the capitol to tempt the young men who are separated from their wives. Once they have been seduced into an affair, they are at the mercy of the lobby.
The theory that paying our legislators a living wage would stop their stealing is ridiculous. Honest men do not steal; if they can't afford the job, they don't take it.
It's rather strange, however, that men who can't support their families can afford liquor and mistresses, for which our legislators are notorious. (Aren't those two items considerably more expensive than food, clothing, and rent?)
Why not go back to defraying only the actual expenses of our lawmakers — on state and federal levels? Then the ambitious young politicians would have to get out, and our lawmakers could be returned to statesmen who are qualified to serve.

A Washington Leak,
But Not a Drop Of Oil

BY CARROLL WILSON
WASHINGTON — Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, on a whirlwind whistle-stop tour of oil-rich nations, will meet with Gov. Dolph Briscoe of Texas next week, the News has learned.
The secretary will arrive in Austin Wednesday after meetings with Saudi Arabian, Egyptian and Iranian officials to continue negotiations with the oil producing countries and Texas for a peaceful and equitable settlement to the petroleum shortage problems facing the United States, an informed source told The News.
White House Spokesman Ron Nessen would say of Kissinger's anticipated trip to the Texas capital only that the secretary was prepared to meet with Briscoe in an effort to assuage the Texas governor's apparent animosity toward American national energy policies.
Kissinger has scheduled a round of meetings with the governor and with selected Texas legislators, including Sen. Maddog Mengden of Houston, who has been an ardent lobbyist for supplying only Texans with Texas oil and gas.
The source told The News Kissinger is also prepared to begin talks to propose an alternative to a Texas plan to divide into five states so more senators can be sent to Washington to lobby for Texas interests.
"We've got enough Presidential aspirants up here now," a well-placed government source close to the situation said. "Besides that, eight more senators from Texas would place a tremendous burden on Washington's alcoholic beverage supply systems."
He admitted, though, that in the dead of Washington winter, the hot air from eight additional Texas senators could provide a much-needed thaw.
Reaction to the reported visit by Kissinger was varied in Austin as police were put on a 24-hour alert in anticipation of angry storms of protest.

"I don't want to talk to him," Sen. Mengden said with a growl. "We're gonna take care of Texans first. To hell with the rest of the country."
Mengden indicated he would not soften on his stand.
"I wouldn't negotiate an inch," he said. "If those Yankees want Texas oil and gas, let 'em exploit their own resources first."
A spokesman for Gov. Briscoe, who said the governor had just gone down for his four-year nap, also took a tough stand.
"I'm not sure the governor will be available for the sessions," the spokesman said. "However, I assure you he has briefed his wife, Janie, and she is prepared to meet with the secretary."
The spokesman admitted that the governor has been approached by Washington officials about opening an embassy in Austin, an indication that diplomatic relations with the United States might be reopened. But, this was the sole indication at mid-week of a chip in the rhetoric-plated armor thrown up by official Austin.
"Janie has indicated she is willing to negotiate with the United States secretary of state," the spokesman said. "But, I cannot comment on the nature of the negotiations."
A source close to the Austin situation, however, revealed that the governor's office expected Kissinger to propose a trade in return for Texas' release of its oil and gas to the rest of the nation and in return for a promise that Texas would not be split into five states.
But, he also indicated the trading may be tough.
It was believed the trading might be hampered by a recent Texas demand that Kansas, Colorado, New Mexico, Montana and Wyoming return land taken from the state before it was incorporated into the union.
The Texas Senate recently passed a resolution calling for the land taken by the U.S. be returned before negotiations could become fruitful.

The resolution read, in part: "Our forefathers fought for the land now encroached upon by squatters and colonialists. We demand its return."
It was learned that Secretary Kissinger was prepared to negotiate with a promise of long-term, low-interest loan for the purchase of weapons for the Texas National Guard.
"We're holding out for a nuclear reactor," the governor's spokesman said flatly.
In other developments on the energy front, the Austin American-Statesman reported Saturday that Texas' membership in the OPEC Energy Conservation and Weapons Stockpile Club is up for consideration in the Middle East prior to this week's meeting.
A spokesman for the OPEC/ENSWC issued a press statement stating that Texas' reaction to Kissinger's proposals would be key to admission to the elite and wealthy organization.

Open House Today For WT Department

The West Texas State University industrial education department will host an open house for the department's expanded facilities on the campus from 2-5 p.m. today and from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday.

Don Enrick, chairman of the department, said the public is invited to attend the open house at the Applied Sciences Building on the north edge of the campus.

The department recently acquired the laboratory and classroom space in the building after the School of Agriculture moved to the old Science Building on campus.

Enrick said high school students from throughout the area have been invited to the open house today and Monday to view the options available in the area of industrial education.

The department currently offers thru degree programs for students.

The industrial technology major offers coursework to prepare students to become managers and supervisors in industrial plants or operations.

The course of study includes courses in various technical areas as well as management and business courses.

The core curriculum which each industrial education department major takes includes courses in plastics, wood, graphic arts, metals, drafting power technology and machines.

Industrial distribution is another major offered by the department. The major includes coursework from both the industrial education department and the school of business and prepares students for careers in industrial sales, either retail or wholesale.

WTSU is one of only two schools in the country with an industrial distribution major, according to Enrick.

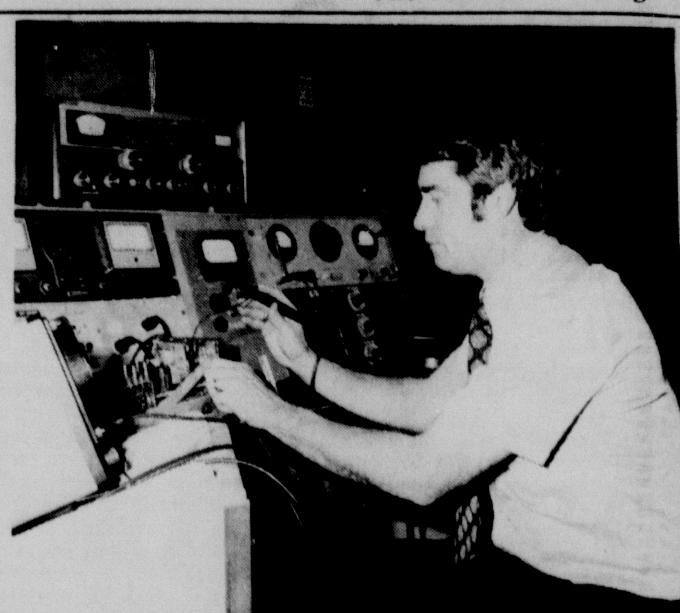

The department also supervised the industrial arts teacher certification program for future teachers.

A masters degree level program in industrial distribution and technology has recently been instituted in the department.

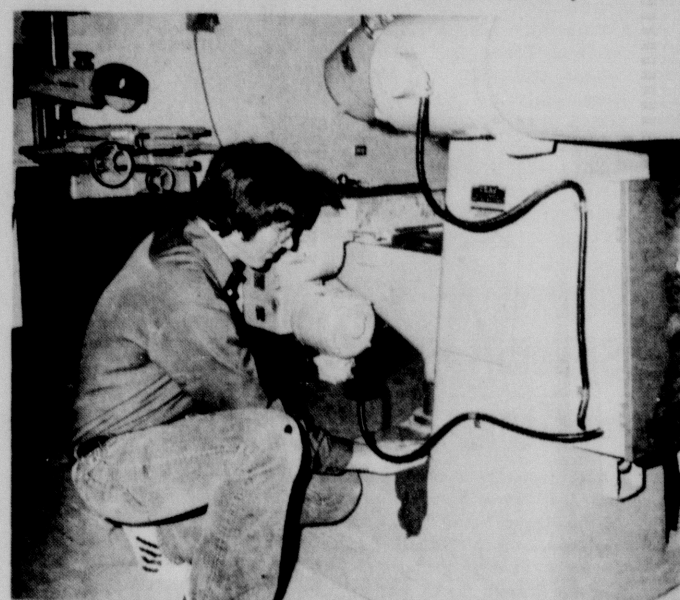

Currently, the department has 200 majors in the three specialties. About 22 students are pursuing the masters degree in the department.

During this week, the department will also host its industrial advisory board for a three-day stay. The board, which consists of men involved in manufacturing and industry from throughout the country, is to meet Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday to review the department's program.

Wednesday night, the department will host about 70 businessmen and industrial leaders on the campus for a banquet. The men will be here Wednesday for seminars sponsored by the department.

Don Enrick, chairman of the Industrial Education Department at West Texas State University, illustrates the use of lab equipment in his department. Open house for the department will be held this afternoon and Monday.

Kim Coats, a junior industrial technology major at WTSU, cleans up shop equipment in preparation for today's and Monday's open house for the Industrial Education Department.

Greek Life Means "Friendship, Responsibility and Leadership"

For Brenda Counsellor Greek sorority life has meant "friendship, the learning of responsibility toward fellow students and leadership."

Miss Counsellor, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Counsellor of 2515 11th Avenue, Canyon, is the current president for her sorority Kappa Delta at West Texas State University.

Born in Amarillo, Miss Counsellor took her public school training from the first grade through senior graduation in 1972 at Canyon. In high school she was active in Future Homemakers of America, Future Teachers of America and served as treasurer of the Future Business Leaders of America chapter.

"I enrolled at the university for the second summer session in 1972 after high school graduation," related Miss Counsellor.

"West Texas was convenient for me and a lot of my friends were planning to go there," stated the elementary education major.

She became acquainted with Greek sorority life at the university when invited to a sorority social and get-acquainted affair and was pledged by the relatively new campus Greek organization in the 1973 spring rush. She previously served as sorority secretary before being elected to her presidency of the collegiate chapter of Kappa Delta this past January.

Under the guidance of Miss Counsellor, the Kappa Delta active chapter is closely associated with the alumnae of the local unit. The active chapter included 36 members and 7 spring pledges and Miss Counsellor finds herself feeling "at home" when talking to alumnae members, since she has been acquainted with many of the alumnae as members of her church and through their community service in past years.

As president of her chapter, Miss Counsellor was recently selected to serve as a delegate to the state convention for Kappa Delta early this summer.

"Education is one of the foremost concerns of sorority life," related Miss Counsellor. "To become affiliated with any of the social sorority's on campus students must maintain an overall grade point average of 1 or more, and this grade point must be held at 1 or above to remain active in sorority life too."

Numerous other Canyon girls have been active in sorority activities while attending West Texas State University in either the Delta Zeta, Chi Omega, Alpha Delta Pi, Zeta Tau Alpha or Kappa Delta active chapters on campus.

Other Canyon girls presently involved in the Kappa Delta sorority are Terri Donovan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Donovan of the city, who was the pledge class president and served as the chartering year president during 1972.

A current pledge of the Kappa Delta sorority chapter is another Canyon girl, Donna Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Shirley Smith; and yet another CHS graduate Suzanne Tenorio, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alex Tenorio, has completed her service with the active chapter of Kappa Delta on campus and has advanced into the alumnae level.

Asked if her parents had either one been associated with social sorority or fraternal interests, Miss Counsellor stated that they had not, and thus her own interests in sorority activities stems from her personal exposure to friendly comradeship of sorority sisters

Wide belts such as the obi, narrow belts, leather belts and fabric covered buckle belts are among the most popular spring collections.

Along with the natural fiber look in fashion goes the "natural look" for belts — in cotton, hemp, linen, wood and straw.

"Rhyme Of The Ancient Water Heater"

Water, water everywhere
And not a drop to drink;
And none to bathe and none to wash.
There's something wrong, I think.
Our ancient water heater,
It burst at 3a.m.
The signs of strain and stress,
I never thought to check for them.
So first thing in the morning
I'll remove this albatross.
An electric water heater

Library Friends Outline Project Ideas

Canyon Friends of the Library has a present membership roll including 176 and incorporation papers have been filed with the Secretary of State of Texas, according to a report given at the executive board meeting Thursday noon at the Yum Yum Tree Restaurant in Canyon.

Reports at the executive session included a "success story" given by Dr. Pat Sullivan on the pre-schoolers story hours which are being conducted Thursday afternoons of each week at the Canyon City Library. He stressed that in the future children will be given the opportunity to expand into arts and crafts projects in connection with the weekly story sessions.

The Library's "Friends" also heard further discussion regarding projects being considered for future beginnings such as a book discussion group for high school students, a large print book collection, and arrangements for books to be available at the hospital, jail, for shut-ins and the LaCasa Canyon Nursing Home.

A Book Sale Committee, headed by Earl Reynolds, reported that plans are being finalized for a fundraising book sale to be held later in the spring.

Collection of books for the spring sale are being directed by Rev. Terry White of the Friends committee. Books, records, prints and tapes will be used in the sale and anyone having such items in very large donation amounts may contact Rev. White at the First Christian Church. Containers for the collection of donated items will be placed in strategic areas around town to aid residents in the effort.

Gene McGlasson reported to the executive committee that incorporation papers on the "Friends" have been filed with the Secretary of State in Texas.

In other business, John Childs, membership chairman, reported that membership in the Canyon Friends of the Library is being held open to further serve anyone interested in joining the organization. Membership applications may be made with Childs at the First National Bank.

Executive board meetings are held every second Thursday at 12 noon at the Yum Yum Tree Restaurant in Canyon and any member of the "Friends" is welcome to join the executive board for these monthly sessions. Full membership meetings will be called as deemed necessary by the board and chairman, Boone McClure.

population limit lowered on that bill or to seek introduction of another bill which would give more power to the commissioners court.

The changes, if wrought, would be significant for the Texas county, which is under current law not allowed to zone or pass ordinances to regulate land use or subdivision development.

Randall county commissioners are also expected to push for adoption of a resolution by the West Texas group seeking an extension of the federal revenue sharing program which will mean $500,000 in revenue to the county before the program ends in 1976.

A resolution passed Monday by the commissioners calling for the Federal Power Commission to restore a number two priority for natural gas use in irrigation wells is also expected to be presented to the West Texas group for passage.

Canyon Junior Forum Disbands After Two Years Of Activity

Canyon's Junior Forum was officially dissolved in a regular business session held Tuesday, March 11, at the University Episcopal Center, according to Kathy Glazener, president 1974-75.

"We voted to dissolve our local membership and disassociate from Junior Forum International, and plan to give any remaining money from the treasury to help the Canyon Senior Citizens with their building fund," reported the president. The Junior Forum has been active in Canyon since the group was organized in February 1973 with a charter membership totalling 45 that May. After busy club-years in the fall of 1973 and spring of 1974, the club resumed membership gatherings in the fall of 1974 with only 22 active members.

"Membership has continued to dwindle," stated Mrs. Glazener, further relating that the dwindling membership is thought to be due in part due to many members either returning to work or enrolling for additional

Sixth Grade Choral Performs

Sixth grade choral students from Rex Reeves Elementary School presented four patriotic songs for members of the Woman's Book Club at their meeting Wednesday, March 12, in the parlor of the United Methodist Church of Canyon.

The choral students were directed by Donna Wilson after which the club had a Texas themed program with Mrs. Rose Kinzer reviewing the book "The Iron Orchard" by Tom Pendleton. Mrs. Kinzer stated that the book has a double theme including the oil industry of Texas and the second theme being the making of a man. The book is a vibrant, brutal story of the men who labored, sweated, lusted and gambled their money and spirits to get oil out of the earth in the Permian Basin.

Mrs. Joseph Findley, club president, presided during the club's business session.

Mrs. Lon Fanning, new president of the club, announced the committee chairmen to serve during her tenure which will include Mrs. L.H. Owens in charge of program; Mrs. T.H. Knighton in charge of membership; Mrs. D.M. Foster in charge of remembrance; Mrs. Lewis B. Henders in charge of finance; Mrs. Marjorie Brewer in charge of telephone committee; Mrs. Ocie Chism in charge of community improvement program; and Mrs. Rose Kinzer in charge of the club's historical information.

Members were reminded of the upcoming Top of Texas District meetings to be held in Amarillo and each club member was requested to furnish a minimum of $5 worth of handicraft work to be sold with proceeds to go toward the maintenance of the state headquarters building.

The Woman's Book Club was designated for appreciation in organizing the Canyon Friends of the Library after their efforts in getting the project started. The appreciation was noted from a letter of the Canyon City Library Board and C. Boone McClure, chairman of the Friends.

The club was recognized for turning in $120.00 from the recent Canyon City Federated Club's sponsored "game night" held to raise funds for the Canyon Division of the Opportunity Plan at West Texas State University.

Next regular meeting for the club will be a "guest day" on April 8 in the home of Mrs. Charles Harter, 1404 Creekmore.
